

PRIME Minister Binyamin Netanyahu has decided to resume all talks with the Palestinian Authority except for those dealing with the Hebron withdrawal, officials in the Prime Minister's Office said last night.

Said last night. The decision means that Netanyahu is not waiting for the impasse with Foreign Minister David Levy to be resolved before proceeding on the diplomatic front. The talks which have here here

The talks, which have been basically suspended since the elections, will not include territorial issues, including the question of the army redeployment in Hebron. Netanyahu has linked the start of those talks to resolving issues of alleged PA activity in Jerusalem. Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai is to present his plan for a Hebron pullback to the premier later this week. According to the Oslo II agreement, Israel is scheduled to make three more unspecified pullbacks over an 18-month period. The first withdrawal is scheduled to take place next month, but no details are known. "The prime minister made the decision to restart all the talks, with the exception of those talks dealing with withdrawal," an official said. The decision came after Netanyahu held consultations Sunday night with a variety of officials, including Mordechai,

When asked if Levy, who is currently on a four-day private visit in the US, had been informed in advance of the decision, the official suggested he was not. But, he said, the Foreign Ministry was informed afterwards.

For an entire week, decisions related to the Palestinian track were frozen, due to the dispute that had erupted with Levy over control of the peace process. Finance Minister Dan Meridor will hold economic talks with his

PA counterpart, Mohammed Zuhdi Nashishibi. Officials in the Prime Minister's Office said a decision has not been made as to whether Mordechai will meet soon with PA leader Yasser Arafai

Maj.-Gen. Oren Shahor will dis-cuss civilian matters with PA negotiator Janul Tarifi tomorrow. Shahor will be joined by representatives of the IDF, Finance Ministry, and the Foreign Ministry.

IDF and PA security officials, who convene quietly on a regular basis, are expected 10 meet this Thursday, when Israel is to raise the issue of the construction of a PA airstrip in Gaza's Dehaniya агеа.

An official said last night that before the airstrip is constructed. Israel and the PA must first hammer out a security accord, like the agreements at the Allenby Bridge and Rafah crossings, to ensure that

Mordechai eases building permit procedures in settlements

DEFENSE Minister Yitzhak Mordechai has eased procedures for obtaining building permits in Judea, Samaria and the Gaza Strip. He has also granted permission for hundreds of trailers to be set up at schools and public institutions in the settlements in time for the new school year.

In a meeting yesterday. Mordechai approved permits for 115 trail-ers to be erected at schools and another 100 trailers to be set up at Shomron College in Ariel. He also gave approval for another 83 to be set up at public institutions on sentements. Not all the details of the new permit procedures were made public.

The moves are in accordance with the government's decision to renew building in the existing seulements. Under that decision, Mordechai is responsible for approving building permits and setting up trailers. Arich O'Sullivan

Ciller: Ties with Israel strong despite gas deal with Iran

Turkey sends two ministers to Iraq

TURKISH Foreign Minister Tancu Ciller met in Ankara with Israeli Ambassador Zvi Elpeleg on Sunday night and assured him that Israel-Turkey ties remain strong despite Turkish Prime Minister Necmettin Erbakan's visit to Teheran, diplomatic sources said. Ciller promised that as long as she is in the coalition, ties between the two countries would not be adversely affected. Erbakan left Teheran yesterday after Turkey and Iran signed a $23 billion gas- supply agreement, Teheran Radio reported. The gas deal involves long-term

It remains unclear how Turkey will finance the construction of a reported $1.2 billion pipeline for the gas deal, especially since its credit rating has just dropped and Western banks might be reluctant to lend the money.

Suissa pledges NIS 15m. to settlements for 'Oslo-related' expenses

INTERIOR Minister Eli Suissa promised yesterday to immediately give the settlements NIS 15 million which had been promised to them by the previous government, but never transferred.

The money is meant to compensale the seitlements for their increased expenses as a result of the Oslo Accords.

"The Oslo Accords naturally imposed a heavy burden on these localities, in terms of longer journeys [10 bypass towns from which the IDF has withdrawn] and additional security demands," Suissa explained, after meeting in Psagot with the Council of Jewish Communities in Judea and Samaria.

Suissa also said he would do whatever he could to speed up planning and construction over the Green Line - a promise which was welcomed by the council, since most council heads consider the building freeze to be their numberone problem,

The minister's promise of financial aid] is like aspirin - it will enable those localities in difficulties to breathe a little until more substantial aid arrives," Yossi Kapah, head of the Kedumim Local Council, told Itim, Suissa himself acknowledged this, stressing that the NIS 15m. transfer "should not be the end of the matter."

"We need to begin looking seri-ously at the real problems and finding more genuine solutions for them," he said.

Deputy council chairman Benny Kashriel noted that Suissa's sup-port on the building issue would be valuable in two ways. First, as a former head of the Interior Ministry's Jerusalem district, he has professional knowledge of the process of getting building plans approved, and could help smooth the path for new building plans in the territories. Secondly, Suissa could be an important voice for the settlers in the cabinet. "He's an excellent minister," Kashriel enthused. "We're very happy, very content. This will guarantee us a channel into the government."

The couocil did oot get everything it wanted, since it believes full compensation for the extra expenses imposed by the Oslo Accords would come to NIS 40m. However, Kashriel said the council was aware that this money may not be available in the 1996 budget, and was happy that at least the discrimination against the settle-ments will be ended. He explained that according to the former gov-ernment's decision, NIS 15m. apiece was to go to three cate-gories of local councils: communities in the territories, development towns and other communi-ties inside the Greeo Line. The latter two categories received their money, but the settlements did not, be charged. Kashriel said the council heads also met recently with Deputy Housing Minister Meir Porush on ways to speed up building in the territories. It was agreed that the council would set up a meeting with Porusb's assistant and the mituistry director-general, at which the council would present lists of all the empty apartments waitiog to be sold, and all extant building plans. Kashriel said the council hopes to see progress on this front by next month. Peace Now, meanwhile, condemned Suissa's decision to transfer the NIS 15m., charging that settlers have already received millions of shekels as a result of the Oslo Accords, io the form of bypass roads and army escorts for school buses.

Hussein and Fahd also agreed to bolster cooperation to fight terrorism, said the Saudi sources. other Saudi sources have said. Saudi Arabia and other Gulf Arab nations turned against Jordan during the 1990-91 Gulf crisis over Kuwait when Hussein refused to join a US-led coalition against Iraq.

But over the past year, Jordan has distanced itself from the Baghdad government and its rapprochement with Gulf Arab states began to accelerate.

The Gulf states cut off hundreds of millions of dollars in aid for resource-poor Jordan and threw out some 300,000 Jordanians during the Gulf crisis to punish Amman for its perceived pro-Iragi stance.

Histadrut Teachers Union calls work dispute

THE Histadrut Teachers Union EVELYN GORDON and Itim declared a work dispute yesterday This would require a significant over the issue of school guards, saying that the school year would not increase in the amount of funds open in any school at which there is allocated to school guards. Currently, the police have some 110 patrol cars and 300 policemen assigned to guarding schools. Committee chairman Sallah Tarif (Labor) termed this a "joke."

Shai Lahman, head of the National Parents Association, supported the Knesset committee's position, and threatened that parents would refuse to send their children to school if the issue were not resolved by September 1.

"If the matter is not resolved in the near future, the opening of the school year is in danger," he said. However, Brig.-Geo. Yigal Pressler, the prime minister's adviser on terror, stressed that the gov-

Eldar sent a letter to all the local authority heads, ordering them to refrain from making any arrangements or hiring any nurses to supply school health services unol the government responds to the author-ities' demands for funding.

Court: New governments should not replace senior civil servants EVELYN GORDON

A CHANGE in government does not justify the replacement of senior civil servants, except in a few cases where a relationship of special trust is necessary, the High Court of Justice said yesterday.

The civil service commissioner is not a job that requires such a relaoonship, the court continued, and therefore, the new government should not have tried to fire Commissioner Yitzhak Galnoor without solid reasons - which, at first glance, appeared not to exist. State appeals against sentence of father who raped daughters

THE State Attomey's Office yesterday appealed to the Supreme Court against a 10-year prison term given to a father convicted of raping his daughters, saying the lower court should have issued a stiffer senlence.

The father, a 58-year-old resident of the center of the country, was convicted of raping and molesting his daughters when they were seven, 13 and 14, and threatening his wife. In the appeal, the state attorney said the man's acts were unusually cruel and disgusting, as stated in the Tel Aviv District Court's ruling. Despite this, the appeal said, the court did not issue the maximum sentence. Moreover, the man had previously been given a suspended sentence for sexually assaulting his daughters.

The state attorney noted that the man had positioned a bed in his living room, where each evening he would pick a daughter to rape, while the rest of the family watched. He threatened his wife and beat her to prevent her from protecting her daughters.

In its ruling, the district court said the man may have been led to act as he did because he was a new immigrant experiencing absorption difficulties. The appeal said such a consideration was flawed, especially since one of the daughters said the man's abuse had begun before the family came to Israel. This is a case of harsh, humiliating acts committed by a man against his daughters, who in their tender years became slaves to the man's unrestrained sexual whims," the appeal said. "The court system is the protector of these minors who have no means of defense. This man should be kept away from his daughters long enough for them to be able to live the rest of their childhoods as children and not as sex slaves to their father." (Inim)

He was a perennial prospect, but with no options left - until Bob Dole summoned him to the second spot on the Republican ticket. As vice presidential nominee, Kemp vaults to the top rank among potential Republican candidates for the White House next time, should Dole fall short, or win one term and decide against seeking another.

"It really feels great to win a silver medal in presidential politics in i 396," Kemp said as he and Dole sailed into San Diego for the Republican National Convention. He had warmed up to go for the gold himself this year, then said no, unwilling to commit to the fund-raising marathon it would have taken to run a primary campaign. He did run in 1988, quit early and said he'd try again.

But there was no evident route back. Not until he became a in the wilderness,

Dole signed him as a partner with national standing, a figure who could boost a ticket that badly needs it, to stir and energize Republicans and to begin cutting away at President Clinton's lead in the public opinion polls. "Everything before has been a warmup, a trial heat," Dole said. "But here in San Diego, the real race begins." Despite the celebration and euphoria of the national cooven-

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Tight securifor the Republican National Convention has already meant long waits in line, stalled traffic and searches of personal items as small as eyeglass cases.

"They've got everything but the sandbags," said Peter Grier, a Christian Science Monitor reporter who compared security measures to those he saw in Saudi Arabia during the Gulf War. Security was revamped after the fatal July 27 bombing in Atlanta's Olympic Centennial Park and the signs of bigh protectioo were everywhere.

The wait entering the harborfront San Diego Coovention Center stretched to an hour or more. Sweet-smiling Elizabeth Dole stays independent CURT ANDERSON

Tuesday, August 13, 1996 The Jerusalem Post

SAN DIEGO

WITH her sweet smile and sugary Southern accept, Elizabeth Dole is the image of the perfect presidential wife, but within lies an ambitious woman every bit as independent as Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Maybe more so. Whether Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole wins or loses to President Clinton in November, Mrs. Dole expects to return to the presidency of the American Red Cross.

"There's a commitment there," she said firmly during a recent half-hour interview.

Mrs. Clinton never tried to become the first presidential spouse in history to work outside the White House. Instead, she worked from within, supervising the massive health reform bill that failed in 1994. It was one of the worst defeats of Clintoo's term, and she has since dropped out of a public policymaking role.

But the two wives are more alike than they appear. Both earned lvy League law degrees, and both had accomplished careers distinct from their busbands – Elizabeth in government and charity, Hillary practicing law.

Perhaps it is just a matter of style, as subtle as Mrs. Dole's decision not to use her middle name, Hanford, or her way of dealing with people, all Southern warmth and soft handshakes.

"Elizabeth does have an image that's softer. I don't know that she's any less driven, or bard-working." said Debbie Walsh, acting director of the Center for the American Woman and Politics at Rutgers University. "She is someone who is quite strong and quite influential.

Mrs. Dole, a North Carolina native, said she does not know Mrs. Clinton well, but considers ber a "gracious" person.

"I think she's a very talented person, very intelligent, very committed to doing what she thinks is right for the country," Mrs. Dole said. "But I see us as very different people with very different styles. We disagree on most of the issues.

Mrs. Dole does not like to be labeled ambitious, saying she attempts to balance her spiritual. personal and professional lives to prevent one from ruling all the others.

Making a positive difference for others, that's what drives me. The word ambition - it's not some driving ambition. That's just not me," she said.

Dole frequently says his wife won't be in charge of health care "or anything else" in his administration, even though she served presidents Reagan and Bush as head of the departments of Transportation and Labor.

She has been mentioned as a vice presidential possibility in past campaigns, and buttons circulating at the Republican convention say "Elizabeth in 2000."

Beyond the Red Cross and a campaign to increase charitable giviog overall, Mrs. Dole describes ber approach as one of a knowledgeable helpmate.

"Since the presidency would be the most demanding job in the world, that would be a time when my husband would need my love and support even more," she said. "That's what I think wives, and spouses, are all about."

She said there is a "cootinuiog dialogue" between the Doles on issues affecting the campaign, one she expects would continue at the White House. She described herself as a sounding board, not afraid to make suggestions.

"I try to sort of be the eyes and ears for him out there," she said. "Obviously, we share thoughts as any couple does that respects one another and has a very bappy marriage.

Mrs. Dole has a number of events scheduled during the convention this week, culminating in speech tomorrow night to the delegates. Her job, she said, is to make people watching at home understand "Bob the person."

Buchanan's decision delighted the Dole camp and removed a major irritant as they prepared for four days of political speeches and boopla that they hope will convince Americans Dole can beat incumbent Clinton in the November 5 election.

The highlight of the first day was to be a speech by retired Armed Forces Chief General Colin Powell that is intended to show the party is inclusive and tolerant of moderates within its ranks.

There also are speeches by former Presidents George Bush and Gerald Ford and a tribute to Ronald Reagan - capped by a speech from his wife Nancy.

who oppose the party's anti-abortion stand and Buchanan, whose 1992 convention speech was thought to have frightened away many potential moderate supporters with its warning that America should wage a war over religious and moral values.

But on the eve of the convention, Buchanan gave Dole an unexpected present, calling a truce until election day so that the party could unite against Clinton.

Bucbanan warned Dole and his supporters nonetheless that despite the truce, he had not ended his crusade to take over the party. "This is not just their party, it is our party too," he said, saying many planks in the party platform came out of his campaign.

Buchanan, who had thought of leaving the party and making an independent bid for the White House, appeared to rule that out, saying, "We can't walk away. America does not necessarily need a third party. What we need is a a fighting second party."

The security screen was put into place Saturday evening after authorities made a final search of the convention center for weapons and explosives ahead of yesterday's opening.

Some found the beightened security frustrating. Lori Solomon of San Diego showed up at the convention center early Sunday to set up a photo concession. Nearly three hours later, she was still waiting.

"We were told we would get our credentials here. We've been waiting since 5:30," she said.

Of the 13 protests staged at the official site Sunday, none drew more than 50 people and most struggled to get a crowd that numbered in double digits. About a dozen police officers were scattered around the perimeter. No arrests were reported.

The more active protests were held in other areas of the city, including Chicano Park, where several hundred college students, Hispanic activists and families marched in support of affirmative action. Along Harbor Drive, the main route from the airport to the convention center, demonstrators held signs supporting abortion rights and others toted Climon-Gore '96 signs.

Interrupting his vacation, Clinton flew to Yellowstone to unveil the plan to halt the mining complex 4 km from the park, which was to extract an estimated $600 million to $800 million worth of gold, silver and copper. "In turn, the United States will give the company federal property worth up to $65 million," the documeot said. Clinton drew attention to the proposed mine during a vacation in Wyoming last year, flying over in a helicopter to inspect it and then moving to slow down mining development in the region.

Environmentalists said the planned complex would badly damage Yellowstone, which sprawls across the three western states of Wyoming, Montana and Idaho. They also disliked it because the company's plan called for a 30-hectare reservoir to hold toxic waste from the mine. "We believe because of the chemistry, the altitude and the proximity to Yellowstone, there is no way you can do this in an environmentally sound manner," Robert Ekey of the Greater Yellowstone Coalition conservation group said.

Critics say the reservoir and its dam, in an area prone to earthquakes, would have to remain intact forever to prevent the waste from contaminating the Yellowstone water system.

NICOSIA (Reuter) - Cyprus yesterday lodged protests with the United Nations after the killing of a Greek Cypriot by a mob during a buffer-zone protest as Turkish Cypriot leader urged the Cypriot president to meet him to help start the process towards a settlement on the divided island.

Foreign Minister Alecos Michaelides summoned ambassadors of the five permanent members of the Security Council and the UN representative to protest over Sunday's violence.

Bloody clashes erupted in Dherinia, 100 km southeast of Nicosia, when hundreds of Greek Cypriots tried to push across the UN-policed buffer zone to protest against Turkey's presence in the north.

More than 50 Greek Cypriots and 12 Turkish Cypriots were wounded io the clashes, the worst violeoce on the island since Turkey invaded its oorthern third in 1974 after a shortlived coup in Nicosia engineered by the colonels then ruling Greece.

"The events of yesterday the criminal and condemnable murder underline that we must accelerate efforts for finding a solution to the Cyprus problem," Michaelides told Reuters.

The international community must multiply efforts and show resolve to bring to an end this drama," he said.

In the Turkish-held north, Turkish Cypriot leader Rauf Denktash reiterated a call to meet Cypriot president Glafcos Clerides.

My call to Mr. Clerides to come and meet me personally is the key to opening the future process" towards a settlement, he told BBC radio.

"If we meet, if we have a coffee together even that will be sufficient indication to the people that something constructive, something positive is afoot."

The dead man, restaurant owner Tassos Isaac, 24, died of severe head injuries. Foreign Minister Tansu Ciller called the Greek Cypriot demonstration a serious provocation.

If there are efforts to disregard the borders of the Turkish Republic of Northem_Cyprus we will take the necessary action," Turkey's Anatolian news agency quoted her as saying. The Grey Wolves had planned a counterdemonstration in the Turkish-held areas and some of their flags were discernible on Sunday being waved in the area where Isaac was killed,

Pictures of the killing show Turkish Cypriot police present as Isaac was being beaten with steel bars. One picture shows a Turkish Cypriot policeman standing over him, holding a steel bar to the man's neck,

"I don't know what picture was manufac-tured and sent to you," Denktash told the BBC. "Because we saw it on the TV as things happened it is certainly not the police who did it. I am sure it is doctored," he said, Isaac was one of around 400 people who entered the buffer zone. The United Nations denied eyewitness accounts that their peacekeepers were standing idle when he was mobbed.

The protesters who charged into the zone were some of thousands who had gathered in Nicosia to take part in a demonstration heading for the occupied town of Kyrenia.

Lebed seeks truce for Chechnya

حكذا من الاحل

RUSSIAN security tsar Alexander Lebed said yesterday he and rebel chief of staff Aslan Maskhadov had agreed to try to work out a ceasefire deal to end seven days of fighting in Grozny.

Lebed, speaking at a news conference after returning to Moscow from talks in Chechnya, spoke of the woeful state of the Russian army fighting there. "I suspected things were bad there, but I could never have imagined they were that bad.

The tough-talking general said the Russian troops sent to quell the region's independence bid were in an awful shape.

The poor creatures, hungry, frail, half-dressed, who man Russian posts there cannot represent the army and the Interior Ministry forces," he said. "One sees people there, indifferent and tired, lacking guidance, their morale low."

This he contrasted with the morale of the enenty whom he described as "good warriors" fired by belief in their homeland.

He said he now expected Russia's Security Council, in which he has a major role, to be given wider responsibilities.

"(Military commander Gen. Konstantin) Pulikovsky and Maskhadov are discussing details of a truce and separation of troops in Grozny right now," he said. "If they agree terms, the cease-

SARAJEVO (Reuter) - NATO ordered isolated troops in Serbheld Bosnia to withdraw to defensible bases yesterday despite an apparent climbdown by the Serbs in a crisis over weapons inspection.

Observers said the NATO order, which included a call to international civilian staff to pull back from Serb territory, would free the alliance to take action against the Serbs, who had been blocking NATO inspection of a military site at Han Pijesak in contravention of the Dayton peace agreement.

Bosnian Serb President Biljana Playsic said yesterday that the NATO-led peace Implementation Force (IFOR) would after all be allowed to examine the site.

LONDON (Reuter) - An exclusive contract between a British tabloid newspaper and a woman expecting eight babies after fertility treatment provoked a torrent of criticism yesterday.

The weekly News of the World reported on Sunday that the woman, MandyAllwood, 31, of Solihull in central England was planning to let nature take its course despite medical advice that this could risk the lives of her babies and herself.

The tabloid newspaper's decision to buy exclusive rights to Allwood's story, which it emphasised with a warning to other media organizations that it would take legal action to defend those rights, fuelled a row over abortions and fertility drugs. In a barrage of criticism,

Britain's media yesterday turned against Allwood and the News of the World, attacking both her character and the newspaper's decision to pay for her story. Sensationalist tabloids and seri-ous broadsbeet newspapers accused the paper and Allwood, a divorcee who already has a son from her first marriage, of indulging in a publicity circus profoundly offensive to childless women.

They focused particularly on Allwood's hiring of media agent Max Clifford, known for handling sensational cases.

The tabloid Daily Mail said in an editorial: "Fertility treatment is being reduced to a freak show." Even the News of the World's sister paper, the mass-selling daily Sun, turned against Allwood, saying: The disturbing case reduces the preciousness of life to a supermarket commodity."

"The Sun initially welcomed the news of Mandy's pregnancy with such delight," it said in an editorial which took up a column of the front page plus an inside page. Only now as the tangled web around Mandy unravels, do we feel a sense of outrage that human life is being treated so lightly,"

The press also targeted Allwood's business dealings, her relationship with the father of the occupiets and the ease with which she got fertility treatment despite both her and her lover having children by other parmers.

Clifford said yesterday Allwood was relaxed and comfortable despite the backlash -

BELLAGHY, Northern Ireland (AP) - Northern Ireland hoped its bitter summer of Protestant parades and Catholic protests finished yesterday after negotiators defused a showdown in this mostly Catholic village.

Riot police lined Bellaghy's William Street as about 400 members of the Royal Black Institution. the province's most religious Protestant order, marched up to Catholic protesters linked arm in arm across the road - then did ao agreed U-turn back down the hill.

Many locals hoped the year's remaining Protestant marches - the bulk coming Aug. 31, including another Black procession through Bellaghy - will avoid the kind aoy more confrontatioos.

"I've lived with these marches all my life. They go right past our door and never give us any bother. We stand and watch them each year even though we're of the opposite religion. I can't really see the sense in trying to stop them, but then I'm not a hard-liner." said Brenda O'Kane, 26, a Catholic whose parents' home and shop was caught io the middle. Like many in Bellachy. O'Kane thought the protest brought more hassle than the marches do. She'd dropped by to have lunch with ber parents, then found herself a prisoner in their bome for a dav.

But those who eventually struck the compromise pro-British Protestants determined to march to their graffiti-strewn hall in Bellaghy, and Irish Republican Army supporters determined to stop them - afterward sounded as determined as ever to thwart each other's will.

"The coosent given today in no way lessens our opposition to sectarian parades." protest organizer Paul Smith, a member of the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party, told the 200-odd people who had camped out in William Street since Sunday afternoon. "Nor does it affect our right to withhold consect on future occasions."

The Blackmen, as members of the marching group are called, denied they negotiated directly with the Catholic protesters, and urged the police to prosecute them all.

The order's chief negotiator in Bellaghy, Robert Overend, condemned the protesters as "sponsored by the IRA." He noted that some protesters were Sinn Fein figures from other parts of Northern Ireland - among them two paroled IRA figures wbo lead anti-marchiog groups in Belfast and Portadown.

"But I suppose it's better that these people are sitting down on the pavements rather than slipping round in the night to shoot me," added Overend, a Bellaghy pig breeder.

Northern Ireland's summer marching season -popularly called "the mad months" - always features heightened sectarian passions.

The Protestant marches and their fife-and-drum bands were part of life for Nobel-wioning poet Seamus Heaney, who was raised on a Bellaghy farm. His Catholic perspective shows in his 1975 poem describing a Protestant drummer: "He is raised up by what he buckles under ... His battered signature subscribes 'No Pope'."

This year Catholic protesters have been determined to bar all three of Northern Ireland's Protestaot fratemal orders from parading in or near Catholic areas - an agenda that exposed the divisions of this society.

Last month police blocked the Orange Order from parading through Portadown's main Catholic district. When police backed down, Catholic areas erupted in fiercer rioting.

NATO Secretary-General Javier Solana also said yesterday after meeting Plavisic, that the Bosnian Serbs would allow the inspection, resolving the "most important violation of the Dayton peace accord". Lebanon first

YRIA'S rejection of Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu's proposal to I resume peace talks based on the concept of "Lebanon first" should lay to rest any illu-sions in the West about President Hafez Assad's desire for peace with Israel. By rejecting such an emineotly reasonable and sensible overture, the Syrian dictator has demonstrated once again that he is in no particular rush to come to terms. Netanyahu's proposal, which he outlined last week in a speech at the graduation ceremony of the National Defense College, is that Israel and Syria should resume talks in the US in an effort, to build trust and inspire mutual confidence between the two sides. The prime minister stated that Israel would be prepared to withdraw its troops from the security zone in southern Lebanon if three conditions are met the disarming of Hizbullah, the deployment of the Lebanese army to the international border with Israel, and the granting of guarantees concern-ing the protection of Israel's Christian allies in southern Lebanon.

As the prime minister noted in his address, the situation in Lebanon is truly Kafkaesque. Netanyahu stated, "Here is a situatioo where the Israeli prime minister announces that he wants to withdraw from the territory of an Arab state -Lebanoo. But the Syrian government, together with the Lebanese, are opposing this withdraw-

Indeed, one cannot help but wonder whether

Syria, its rhetoric notwithstanding, is truly inter-ested in an Israeli withdrawal from southern Lebanon. The presence of Israeli forces in Lebanon provides the Assad regime with a rallying cry, and enables Syria to justify the preseoce of its own occupation army, which controls two-thirds of Lebanese soil.

Were Israel to withdraw, international pressure would almost certainly mount on Syria to pull back its forces as well, something that Assad, who views Lebanon as part and parcel of Greater Syria, is oot particularly inclined to do. Leaving Lebanon would also require Syria to give up on the profitable opium and bashish industry that it oversees and cultivates in the Bekaa Valley; which has proven to be an important source of revenue for senior Syrian officials.

Netanyahu's proposal should also help remove doubts abouthis diplomaticskills. Less than two months ioto his administration, Netanyahu bas shrewdly succeeded in maneuvering the Syrian leader firmly into a corner, forcing the latter to come across as the rejectionist in the eyes of the world. This is oo small acbievement, given Assad's reputation for being a clever and calculating political operator. By placing the ball squarely in Assad's court, and outfoxing him io the process, Netanyahu has demonstrated not only that he is interested in peace, but that he can also play the game of international diplomacy with the best of them.

Adolescent behavior

THE Hebrew term tipesh-esreh ("silly teens"), perhaps best describes the years of adolescence. No doubt all of us can remember, with varying degrees of embarrassment, the thoughts, feelings and fantasies that occupied our minds during this vital period of development. Few national television reporters would say that such feelings and fantasies are worth prime-time exposure.

And so it should have been with the remarks made by the teenage girls in Kiryat Gat who claimed to idolize Yigal Amir. However, it appears the interests of the "silly teens" coin-cided with the interests of the "silly teens" coin-the newsroom at Israel Television, and so the prestigious Yoman newsmagazine decided to devote precious minutes of airtime to three immature adoles constitution about their externo immature adolescents talking about their attraction to Yitzhak Rabin's murderer. Of course, these teens should be taken to task. Amir's murder of the prime minister, and his refusal to express remorse, should only evoke feelings of utter revulsion. But the fact that these girls apparently feel otherwise signifies more that they have a lot of growing up to do than any deep failing on the part of the statereligious schools.

There is oo denyiog the existence of a danger-ous fringe in Israeli society that does not have the proper respect for the rule of law and democratic norms: the shameful "pilgrimages" to Baruch Goldstein's grave in Kiryat Arba is but one example. But theKiryat Gat schoolgirls do not belong in this category. Had the Yomanshown that these teenagers were only the tip of the iceberg, and that there were hundreds and thousands of youngsters flocking to Yigal Amir "fan clubs," then it would be a different matter, worthy of an Education Ministry probe. But as long as it is just an isolated incident of three silly girls - who are now beginning to sing

GOP nominee Bob Dole is considered by most to be a fair weather friend, but his choice for running mate has proven himself a consistent and reliable supporter. During his 18 years in the House of Representatives, Kemp was the leading conservative and Republican voice in support of foreign aid generally and for Israel in particular. He did more than vote for aid; he persuaded other conservatives to do so as well.

As the sector Republican on the critical Appropriatioos Subcommittee on Foreign Operations, which bad jurisdiction over military and economic assistance for Israel, he demonstrated his friendship over and over. His came was attached to many of the key pro-Israel initiatives in Congress during the 1980s.

Later as George Busb's Secretary of Housing and Urban Development he proved to be a lonely friend of Israel. He was at the center of one of the more infamous moments in the US-Israel relationship when Secretary of State James Baker called him on the White House carpet for agreeing to meet his Israeli counterpart, Housing

Clinton and Gore are generally considered to have the closest and friendliest relationship ever between a president and vice president. No one expects that to happen if Dole and Kemp are elected. The two are old and acerbic rivals; this year Kemp waited until late in the primary season to make any endorsement and then went with Dole's rival, Steve Forbes. But such pairings are not uncommon. John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson were effective running mates who did not like each other very much and were never close.

It remains to be seen how much influence Kemp will have with Dole. During the campaign Dole is taking a pro-Israel stance, as most candidates do, but the test will come when and if he gets to the White House. In the previous Republican administration, vice president Dan Quayle had a pro-Israel reputation but no influence when it was needed. CHARLES KRAUTHAMMER a major speech last week at George Washington University, President Clinton called for strong new measures against terrorism, calling it the successor to Nazism and communism as the great scourge of our time. It was an admirable attempt to mobilize a country's will and resources to fight. But like all such attempts from Clinton and previous presi-dents, the rhetoric far outran the real measures proposed.

Clinton talked about working with allies, increasing intelligence-gathering, establishing FBI offices in far-flung capitals. He talked about the pious talk emanating from such anti-terrorism "summits" as Sharm el-Sheikh, at which countries that wink at terrorism denounced it at our behest for a day. Most of the president's talk centered on passive measures hardening the national cocoon the way we have come to harden our homes against rampant street crime. He talked, for example, about increased airport security and chided Congress for refusing to give him increased wiretap authority against terrorists.

What is missing in all the rhetoric about terrorism is a readiness for active measures. We do a lot of detecting and defusing of terrorism. What is lacking is •deterrence. All this effort with wiretapping, bomb-sniffing, intelligence-sharing is aimed at reducing the terrorists' ability to carry out their attacks. What we are not doing is diminishing their will to carry out the attacks.

In 1994, Israel's industrial exports, not including diamonds, came to $11,500,000,000. Agricultural exports for this year came to a miserable $591,000,000. The agricultural sector provided employment for a mere 3.3% of the registered civilian work force. And yet agriculture gets the lion's share of our water.

So what should we do with our water? We should use agricultural water - and land - 10 create more parks, more forests. more green recreational areas, which will benefit the entire population and not serve just a privileged few.

Hi-tech irrigation systems, coupled with appropriate vegetation for our desert climate, can give us all-year-round greenery for far less water than fields of crops., which lie brown and empty for several months of the year. Our hi-tech exports can pay somebody else to do the unskilled work of producing low-tech oranges. With export dollars we can buy all the food we want from countries with enough water and unskilled labor to make agriculture worthwhile. Let Turkey, with its vast land mass, overflowing water resources, and cheap unskilled work force, be our agricultural hinterland.

Of course, we should be dependent for our survival on our suppliers, but how long would we lass if our oil and coal supplies were cut off? If we can not be really and truly self sufficient, why should we believe that growing our own sunflower seeds will make any difference?

According to government predictions, if our use of water increases at the present rate. and no alternative source become available, demand will overtake supply in about 40 years. We cannot uproot all our orchards ovemight, but we must start planning for the post-agricultural society as soon as possible. How we share out our water should not be a matter to be decided between a handful of government bodies, and a few interested parties, but should be the subject of lively public debate. Let those who earn the nation's bread help decide how to enjoy its water.

We do a lot of detecting and defusing of terrorism. What is lacking is deterrence war on us through terrorism. Declaring war is first of all a declaration of national intent.

Second, declaring war has a psychological purpose. It tells the American people that terrorism is not domestic crime writ large but a form of war by other means. It is not a law enforcement problem where the model is extradition and trial, but war where the model is, in the immortal words of Gen. Colin Powell, to cut off the enemy and kill it.

Third, a declaration of war will make it a lot easier for the international lawyers and text-readers that abound in American government to countenance the forceful military measures required to actually deter state-sponsored terrorism. A declaration of war takes us from being the hand-tied vicums of belligerency to acquiring the rights of a belligerent.

What rights? The right to impose on country X a naval blockade, for example. Instead of begging, cajoling or threatening third parties not to trade with our enemy, we simply say: "Sorry, we are in a state of war. Nothing goes in, nothing goes out. Our navy will make sure." We would also enjoy the right to attack country X at our choosing. We have the capacity through our stealth weapons to turn out the lights of any capital on earth. If we discover that some capital was bebind the destruction of TWA 800, we should do just that: Tum out the lights, blockade the harbors, declare that we will not rest until the regime has fallen and the terrorists and their sponsors have paid the price.

Declaring war is a serious step. But war has already been declared - by the terrorists. We can either continue pretending that it hasn't, or we can respond in kind. Moreover, when you call something the moral equivalent of Nazism and communism, as Clinton did, it is incumbent upon you to fight it with something more than wiretaps and bomb detectors.

After the triumphant visit of the newly elected prime minister to the US and his speech to the Congress that was greeted with many standing ovations, Netanyahu had the Congress and people of the US in the palm of his hand. To an America recling from Arab terrorism at 88 home, in the air and overseas, the visitor from Israel seemed like a breath of fresh air, and a return to the old Israel that never compromised with terrorists, but spread oo effort to bunt down and eliminate them. factor in any future Arab-Israeli war. Water will play a major part in a solid peace agreement with the Syrians. The success or failure of our relations with the Palestinian Authority in the West Bank will depend to a considerable degree on bow we share the available water.

Convectional wisdom, which could perhaps better be translated as vested interests, tells us that we are running out of water. We are told that Palestinian control of the water sources in the West Bank, Syrian control of the Golan's rivers and springs, will mean the end of life as we know it. A few more immigrants, another new town or two, and we shall all be sharing our bath water - before we get to drink it!

And yet, we have pienty of water! The problem is not the quantity, but the way we choose to use it. We are not a coosumeroriented society. Very little atten-tion is paid to the use of our natural resources, be they land or water. Let us look at the government's own statistics, published by the Foreign Ministry's Information Division. In 1994, the latest year for which figures are available, iodustry used 129 million cubic meters. A further 545 million cu.m. went for household use, and a huge 1,181 million cu.m. was wasted on agriculture.

Wasted? Water for agriculture was wasted? Yes, in our postindustrial society, where the silicon chip and software have replaced the orange as a source of employment and income, our agricultural needs have changed. We no longer need large orchards, using valuable water, tended by

Live at Budokan BLUR (NMC)

N the surface, The Black Crowcs and Blur have absolutely nothing in common - southern-fried boogie vs. Brit guitar pop. However, the two hands share a glorification of the past to such an extent that their records sound like products of another era.

If how a band sounded was the only criteria, the Black Crowes would have a good argument for being one of the best bands of the 1990s. With swagger and confidence tempered by subtlety and vulnerability, the group captures the essence of great rock 'n' roll as handed down from Dylan's Blonde on Blonde through the Rolling Stones' late Sixties period, and everything in hetween.

By iocorporating blues and country stylings, the group stakes its claim as the heir apparent to the Band as the main purveyors of rock Americana.

Unfortunately, it doesn't have the songwriting to stand along the artists that inspired it.

That said, there's enough good material on its fourth album, Three Snakes and One Charm, to make this an appealing and commendahle set.

In addition to the aforementioned sighting, you'll also hear traces of Little Feat, the Faces, Sly and the Family Stone and countless other classic bands of a bygone era in which the music was more important than the clothes.

The lead track, "Under a Mountain," a dense Exile in Moin Street-sounding effort, sets the pace for a varied set. From the crisp, acoustic "Bring On Bring On" and "How Mucb for Your Wings" to the countrified blues of

S youngsters from France, Mexico,

"Good Friday," you see the Crowes expanding its references, challenging its limits and in the process creating a style that moves beyond the 1960s wannabes it's heen pegged as

This feels like a transitional record for the Crowes, in which it's taking the legacy of its musical heroes and trying to develop a sound it can call its own, and we can call our own.

Crossing the ocean, we find Blur facing the same problems as the Black Crowes: a great deliv-ery of ordinary material.

Without argument one of the top two or three bands in England, Blur's influence on British pop in the Nineries can't be understated. With its neo-mod 1960s meets 1970s glitter approach, it's influ-enced a host of bands to return to guitar rock.

Here, the band is captured on a 1995 tour of Japan in a live dou-ble CD, available in a limited-edition release.

All the hits are here, from "Popscenc" to "Girls & Boys." Sparked by a sparkling horn section, the hand works together beautifully on the 25 songs spanning its six-year career.

The Ziggy Stardust-era Bowie comparisons are as unavoidable as the Jam-doing-the Who and late Seventies punk influences are apparent.

But maybe, due to the sheer size of the collection or the underdeveloped songwriting, few tracks stand out.

Or maybe it was all said too well the first time around by Pete Townshend in 1965, Bowie in 1971 and Paul Weller in 1977.

Barney's gets extension on reorganization plan

NEW YORK (Reuter) - Barney's Inc. said yesterday it won 90 days of breathing room from a federal bankrupicy court, which granted the upscale men's retailer more time to file a plan of reorganization.

The development puts off for now an attempt by Saks Holdings Inc., the owner of Saks Fifth Avenue, and Barney's business partner, Isetan Co. Ltd., to file a competing plan to reorganize Barney's, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in January.

The court extended Barney's exclusive right to file such a plan until November 5, and also extended, until January 6, 1997, Barney's exclusive right to solicit acceptances for its plan.

Isetan and Saks had been considering filing a plan to take Barney's out of bankruptcy by giving Saks control of the retailer.

Barney's last month said it was "outraged" by that idea, saying Isetan was interfering with its own discussions with Saks as a potential investor.

LONDON (Reuter) - Train drivers on the London Underground have called off a 24-hour strike planned for today, a senior union official said.

The move was the first indication of an end to a damaging series of 24-hour strikes by the ASLEF and RMT unions that has paralyzed the capital's "tube" system several times in recent months and brought misery to its 1.6 million daily users.

Then Inzamam and Ijaz, a century-maker in the first innings, joined forces to put on 98 together

In the closing exchanges Athertoo and Graham Thorpe formed an unlikely bowling attack as England's four pacemen were forced to called it a day.

Atherton, who bad a Test bowling average of 282 coming into the match, claimed Wasim's wicket for seven to finish with one for 20 from seven overs.

"I came on to bowl thinking l might get my average over the 300 mark but Wasim spoiled the script," joked Atherton. "I think Wasim read it as a googly." Wasim said: "I have got him out enough times but I'm going to have to live with this for a few years now he's got me once." England are quoted hy bonk-makers at 7-2 to win the third Test

The London club said in a statement: "The board have decided that it was in the best long-term interest of the club that Mr. Rioch should now leave."

His managerial reign at Highbury is the shortest in the past 50 years. Rioch took over at Arsenal in 1995 after former manager George Graham left in disgrace following transfer irregularities.

He broke the Arsenal transfer record hy signing Dutch ioternational Dennis Bergkamp for £7.5 million from Inter Milan and also signed former England captain David Platt from Sampdoria for £4.75m.

But any hopes the club had that the appointment of Rioch would hring calmer times after the lengthy scandal surrounding Graham were soon dispelled.

Hill, Villeneuve prepare for racing showdown

Grand Prix left bis Williams team mate Damon Hill grumbling about tactics and clutches and set-up a thrilling showdown for the world drivers' title.

As the Canadian celebrated his narrow win, by just 0.7 seconds over the world championshipleading Briton, and the Williams team's record-equalliog eighth constructors' championship title. Hill left the circuit early for a promotional appointment.

"This win is certainly goiog to make things exciting," admitted Hill. "It is going to be great for the viewers and tough for us. 1 was disgusted with my start and coofused by the strategy but all that spart it was an exciting гасе

Villeneuve, 25 and the winner of the Indy Car World Series title last year when he also won the Indianapolis 500, now stands only 17 points behind Hill in a title scrap which has become a private duel between the two Williams men.

His victory on Sunday ensured not only that Williams equalled Ferrari's eight team titles but also that no other driver can now reach his or Hill's number of points in a season dominated by the Anglo-French team.

"I am delighted to have won this race because il was not on my kind of track and because I beat Damon out there on the circuit," said Villeneuve. "It also makes it great for the championship. I said I would fight and I am going to keep fighting for it." As the Williams team celebrated with a champagne and tea party at their motor bome, team chief Frank Williams made ii clear he would let the two drivers slug it out for the title without any interference, providing they both acted responsibly.

"I don't expect to see them start BUDAPEST (Reuter) – Jacques Villeneuve's finest Formula One victory in Suoday's Hungarian are still driving for the team and I expect they will behave properly . on the track and drive with responsibility."

Asked about the title, he said: : It's been coming for a little while but we've been strong in the last two races. It's a brilliant team effort and I am thrilled to bits about it.

"It's a wonderful result for both drivers, great teamwork, great : Renault engine and a great day for all of us."

Williams technical director Patrick Head, the engineering : chief of the team who has created the cars which have won all the titles, was equally delighted.

"It is a fantastic win for the team and it is down to the efforts ; of everyone working for us and for Renault. Real teamwork," he said.

He said Hill's strategy had been changed from two stops to three because of his poor start, the need to adjust tactics to make up for lost time and the problems of overtaking on the tricky Hungaroring

He also said Hill's complaints about the clutch might have to be considered hut poinled out that the Briton's starting was out-standing in 1993 and had deteriorated progressively each season

Hill left the track early to fly to Romania for a promotional engagement with the team's sponsors, leaving the party behind.

But hefore leaving he said he did not expect any problems in his relationship with Villencuve as the pressure built up with only four races remaining.

In the past, notably in 1987 with Nelson Piquet of Brazil and Briton Nigel Mansell, the Williams team has seen its drivers fall out when in a similar position. "I don't think we'll see anything like that," said

1/2 THE HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME -There's something surprisingly effective about Walt Disney's anempi at the gothic. The Hunchback is a spooky film, and one that doesn't shy away from the heavier themes of Victor Hugo's novel. Of course Disney will always be Disney: at the (happy) end of the movie, the filmmakers can't resist the urge to plant a smiley face on the great tonured romance, and exchange Quasimodo's anti-social suffering for a Bambiesque moral about tolerance, friendship and the need to look beyond appearances. (There are both English and Hebrew versions. Suitable for general audiences.)

Prisoner escape due to overcrowding

THE escape of two security prisoners from Ashmoret Prison last week was in targe part due to the confusion caused by the Oslo Accords, which necessitated the transfer of hundreds of prisoners from the territories to prisons in Israet in one felt swoop last October, prison officials told the Knesset State Control Committee yesterday.

Prisons Deputy Service Commissioner Yitzhak Nir told the committee that when the IDF withdrew from the major Arab ciries in Judea and Samaria, hundreds of prisoners had to be transferred from the prisons there to prisons within the Green Line. However, he said, the receiving prisons had neither the space nor the manpower to absorb these extra prisoners.

As a result, Ashmoret, for them from the prison while the work was being done. Nir said. The urgent need to finish the work quickly to make room for the newcomers, as well as financial considerations, led to the decision to use the prisoners themselves as laborers - a decision which the breakout proved to have been a bad mistake. Nir added. However, he said, there was also a significant element of human error. The guard who was sup-

DAYS after the defense minister publicly stated there was a problem with motivation among youth to serve in the army and promised to spur the country's troops to new heights, the army announced its next major project: a new prison.

ARIEH O'SULLIVAN

The announcement came during a visit by the general staff to the army's largest brig, known at Keleh Arba, or prison No. 4, located at the Tzrifin base. Led by Chief of General Staff Lt.-Gen. Amnon Lipkin-Shahak, the IDF's top generals got a look at a side of the military that 27,000 soldiers experience first hand a year. Head of Military Police Brig.-

Gen. Niram Goldbrum said some 80 percent of those in military prisons were conscripts, with reservists comprising the rest. He added that 80 percent of those being held for desertion were reservists.

Goldbrum said Keleh Arba was currently undergoing a general renovation after the general staff ordered military prison conditions improved. The plan calls for a new, large and central prison to be built in the center of the country which will consolidate the inmates who are now spread out in a num-

Israeli immigrants to the US moving up the ladder

MARILYN HENRY NEW YORK

ONCE condemned by Americans for abandoning the Zionist dream, Israeli immigrants to the US appear to be coming more involved with the American Jewish community, according to a report in the 1996 edition of the American Jewisb Committee Yearbook. They also are surpassing other immigrant groups in economic success, according to a wide-ranging report on Israeli immigrants. Israel's social, economic, cultural and political links with the US contribute to a sense of familiarity and make integration relatively easier," according to Steven Gold and Bruce Phillips, the authors of the report in the yearbook. Nostalgia and homesickness also may be incentives for co-ethnic cooperation, the researchers said, noting that recently Israelis and American Jews have started to relate to each other "more openly and constructively." However, the authors said, Israelis feel "significant social distance from American Jews in language, values, sociability and lifeshaping experiences." Furthermore, the Israeli immi-grants in the US "almost universally regard Israel as a better place for children," Gold and Phillips wrote. "It is safer, they maintaio, has fewer social problems, and does not impose the generational conflicts Israelis confront when raising children in the United States. The number of Israelis now living in the US is likely under 200,000, divided between New York and Los Angeles, according to Gold and Phillips. The data, which indicate a steady acceleration of Israeli immigration to the US, also show that the number returning to Israel has increased substantially since 1992, Gold and Phillips said. Their estimates rely on a variety of demographic accounts. Israeli women in the US are more likely than men to emptoyed as professionals, because of their prominence as teachers in Jewish schools. Half the Israeli men are employed as managers, administrators, professionals and technical specialists. Only one-quarter work in sales. The earnings of Israelis are approaching those of native-born white Americans Gold and old and

Israeli UN delegation concerned over international criminal court proposal

THE UN opened a two-week session yesterday designed to iron out a proposal for a standing international criminal court, 50 years after the Nuremberg tribunal. With an agenda that includes discussions on crimes against humanity, terrorism and the definition of genocide, the prospects for the proposal were bleak, observers said.

You can't get 185 nations to agree on how to milk a cow, let alone solve these problems," said Benjamin Ferencz, a former Nuremberg prosecutor who has written the standard texts on international criminal courts.

The Israeli delegation is concerned that such a court would become a political tool. "We cannot create a situation which with allow individual states to make use of the inherent jurisdiction of the court to harass other states for cide, although the international

States should have the right to refuse to surrender a person for a number of reasons, includiog to maintain the security or other essential interests of the requested country, Golan also said.

There are enough other contentious issues to keep delegations wrangling for years, although a proposal was expected to be presented to the General Assembly, which opens next

"You don't need a political body to tell you that someone is committing genocide," said Thomas Buergenthal of the George Washiogton University Law School, an authority on buman rights law. People who arrived arround noon at the nearby Yeshivat Hashalom, which is headed by kabbalist Rabbi David Batzri, were told to light a candle and then put the name of the sick person, and a donation, in an envelope. Then they were directed to the synagogue, two blocks away.

At the synagogue, one woman who stepped out of the stifling women's section from time to time for a cigarette said she had come because she wanted to help her sister who had accumulated a NIS 3 miltion debt and had gone bankrupt.

'I don't believe you push a button and something happens," said the woman, 51, who described herself as having become religiously observant five years ago. "But I believe that somehow this will help. You have to understand all the processes through which God works.

A young man with a thin mustache and a crocheted kippa, and a whitebearded man in black suit and hat were among the wheelchair-bound participants. A man who brought his wife in a wheelchair couldn't get her into the women's section and had to leave her on the landing outside.

a brief revivalist talk. Then an assistant brought in a sack full of envelopes and emptied it on the central bima. Outside, a man explained to a distraught woman that the rabbi would not read out each name, but would have them all in mind as he prayed.

More than an hour after the service started, there was a sudden crescendo as the sound of several shofars blown in unison electrified the

Finally, a rabbi lit a candle and intoned a prayer "for all those who are ill - those who have mental illnesses, anxieties, phobias." He urged everyone to repent. "for we can never know why a person is suffer-

Then he lit a candle "for all the spirits who are still wandering, may they depart without harming the person they've inhabited and may they find rest.'

Charity would help too, he added. He suggested participants donate NIS 160 for each sufferer, since in gematria the letters representing 160 form the Hebrew word "tzelem." which, he said, is "the person's soul." Whatever the ceremony was, it was not an exorcism of dybbuks, according to Prof. Yoram Bilu, of the Hebrew University's psychology

To make the dybbuk leave, the exorcist would bring the victim to the synagogue, the her up if the spirit was violent and gag her if the spint refused to be quiet.

The ceremony would begin with gentle persuasion, followed by buming holy names written on blue paper and making the victim smell that.

"It was a very dramatic ceremony and it was fantastic street theater." Bilu said. "That was one of its functions. All kinds of forbidden subjects, like sex and aggression, came up. The spirit was allowed to speak about all these things. After all, it was the spirit of a sinner."

Batzri's great-grandfather, Rabbi Yehuda Fetaya, was known as a healer and an interpreter of dreams, Bilu said. Yesterday's ceremony was on the occasion of Fetaya's vahrzeit. But Batzri has a decidedly modern bent. Two weeks ago, on Tu Be'av celebrated by some today as "the holiday of lovers" - he appeared on TV to tell the future of unmarried men and women.

None of the wheelchair-bound participants in yesterday's event left on their own two feet. But like the woman who had come to belp her bankrupt sister, they seemed to take comfort from the mere act of trying. And so, apparently, did the yeshiva, whose coffers benefited.
